Programming Problems : 2.26

Purpose : writing a simple program to read data from one file and copy them to another file.

Input : at first it give directory of files or you can use 'default' then names of input and output files.

Output : none

Os : Windows

Capabilities :

- if you enter name of input file that not exist then until you enter the correct name , program give name from you.
- if you enter name of out put file that not exist then program ask you whether you want to create or not . if you say no program will give another name.
- if you enter name of out put file that exist then program ask you if you want delete that and create another one or not . if you say no program will give another name.
- copy the whole content of first file to second file

By Mina Shaigan